“ Katy was reaching for you on the screen. I ended up getting huge squeezes, but I think they were intended for you! It was really great watching you and hearing your voice. We don't get enough voice time ... Will close for now; want to get them settled, watch your movie, and go to sleep.”

BATH TIME IS OVER AND KIDS ARE IN THEIR PAJAMAS waiting for a bedtime story with dad. There is no squirming as Dad's calm voice reads a favorite Dr. Seuss book aloud. When he's done, they replay the DVD recording and watch him again. This is the power of the United Through Reading[®] Military Program.

When a parent is deployed the USO and United Through Reading help families stay connected through reading. Parents can visit a USO Center or other United Through Reading sites throughout the world to read a children's book aloud while being recorded. The DVD recording, the book and simple instructions are sent back home to the deployed service member's family for free.

Families play the recording at bedtime, story time or anytime. They will watch it over and over again, memorizing every word of the story and soaking up every gesture from mom or dad. Parents or caregivers at home often photograph or record their children's reaction, which they send back to the deployed parent to share the impact and complete the circle of communication.

"We recently went to Qatar for a four-day pass and used your USO facilities. The staff was wonderful and ensured that the books and video made it to our children. Our girls enjoyed the DVD so much they brought it to school and both classes watched it!"

For young children, the DVD recordings help them remember what a parent looks like during a long deployment. "A child has a hard time understanding that mom or dad is okay from an e-mail or a letter," a Marine chaplain told us. "A video image reassures the child that his or her parent is doing well."

United Through Reading fulfills an aching need for the on-duty parent, too. Like the brand-new dad en route to Iraq who stopped at a USO center after two days in transit without sleep. Never mind a shower, never mind a snack, he immediately headed for the United Through Reading room to record a story for his infant son.

USO centers have a supply of books that kids love. "My wife wrote me that my daughter watches her video every day and that she answers my questions each time as though I were right there asking them."

United Through Reading[®]

Founded in 1989, United Through Reading is the nation's first nonprofit to promote the read-aloud experience for separated military families. United Through Reading offers deployed parents the opportunity to be video-recorded reading storybooks to their children which eases the stress of separation, maintains positive emotional connections and cultivates a love of reading. At nearly 200 recording locations worldwide, Marines, Soldiers and Sailors, National Guard, Reservists and Airmen, can read to their children from units on ships, in tents in Afghanistan, on bases and installations around the world and at 70 USO centers worldwide. Over one and a half million military parents, spouses and children have benefited from the program since its inception.

This program is one of the many ways that the USO fulfills its mission to lift the spirits of U.S. troops and their families. Through special programs, targeted services, entertainment tours and in more than 160 USO centers around the world, this private, nonprofit organization continually seeks ways to build morale and express appreciation to active duty military personnel and their families.
